Why recipients like working with USAID

- Rules & Regulations largely promote best business practices
- Rules & Regulations are openly shared with recipients
- USAID is committed to providing its “fair share” of funding so recipients can achieve project goals and objectives
- USAID is truly interested in supporting good development work
Know USAID’s Funding Framework

Assistance/Support

- Goal: Assist, stimulate, support a program
- Benefit: Flows down to the recipient or the program
- Relationship: Transfer of funds to support grantee
- Funding mechanism: Grant, Cooperative Agreement

Acquisition/Purchase

- Goal: Acquire, purchase specific deliverable
- Benefit: USAID/US Government
- Relationship: Exchange of funds for contractor goods/services
- Funding mechanism: Contract, Purchase Order
From the Outset Partners Should

- Appreciate the differences between assistance and acquisition
- Know which regulations apply to your organization, your award and any sub-awardees
- Use pre-award Q&A process wisely
- Develop and follow an internal award review process prior to signature
- Understand roles & responsibilities on your side and on USAID’s Pay Particular Attention to your Policies for

- Property & Procurement
- Accounting
- Travel
- Human Resources
- Subrecipient Monitoring
- Indirect Cost Treatment

Perspective from a Graduating For Profit Contractor
Understand the USAID Culture first. Long seen as the benevolent face of the American people. Focuses on ‘what’s in it for THEM (developing economies) and not us. USAID takes on and tackles some of the most foundational problems facing the world today -- basic education, global health, freedom of expression, agriculture productivity, climate change resilience, and so on.

Understand Who USAID Serves. The soft side of engagement. Know who the program beneficiaries are and understand their needs. The focus of the missions is to better their countries.
Incorporate Global Understanding in Your Work, No Matter What Work. Even if you are doing accounting, IT services for the missions it is important to understand what the agency does.

Understand Country Context. Country Development Cooperation Strategies, also known as CDCS. These five-year, country-based strategies show how Agency assistance is synchronized with other agencies' efforts.
Direction of USAID – Acquisition vs. Assistance

- USAID is doing more assistance - average 20 to 30% less time to do a Cooperative Agreement than Contract

- NGOs and non-profits that work with AID are sophisticated they must maintain strong financial and contractual compliance systems, which is very hard given the terrain they work in.

- ADS Chapter 304 Selecting Between Acquisition and Assistance (A&A) Implementing Instruments

- Section 7032(e) from the FY16 appropriations bill
Importance of Compliance

- USAID is very serious when it comes to compliance.
- Because of the difficulties working in these countries having strong financial and contracts systems set ups are critical.
- USAID has come down hard on both for profits and non-profits for non-compliance.
- Every Agency says they are serious about compliance but USAID is season and mean it.
Final Tips

- If you are Small Business new to USAID - recommend focusing on DC based work and team up (it's a rite of passage).

- Seasoned government contractor - be ready for the long haul. USAID needs you to show related past performance.

- Know the agency, know the mission. People in this industry are career professionals -- from technical to accounting.

- USAID is one of the most sophisticated, demanding and high quality agency to work with.
