OVERVIEW

PVOS PIVOTAL IN GLOBAL RESPONSE

INTRODUCTION

From tackling global health challenges to providing humanitarian assistance, the U.S. Agency for International Development's private voluntary organization (PVO) partners are at the forefront of international development work. PVOs play an integral role in bringing expertise and resources to the table and making successful global aid and development outcomes a reality.

Over the past year, PVOs and USAID have addressed a number of complex and ongoing humanitarian crises—including earthquakes in Nepal, conflict in Syria, and the Ebola outbreak in West Africa—while also pushing forward the development agenda by working to end extreme poverty, implementing Power Africa, and supporting the Grand Challenges for Development. As essential USAID partners, PVOs contribute their expertise in global health, humanitarian assistance, agriculture, and many more focus areas (see infographic on pages 6 and 7), and the PVO community's work with local civil society and private-sector partners ensures that assistance is inclusive, sustainable, and effective.

At a roundtable event in 2013 President Obama said, "The strength and success of all countries and all regions depends in part on protecting and supporting civil society." At this event, the United States and 23 nations in a Joint Statement on the Promotion and Protection of Civil Society affirmed that "the strength and vibrancy of nations depend on an active civil society and robust engagement between governments and civil society to advance shared goals of peace, prosperity, and the well-being of all people." These declarations remind us of the relevance of civil society and that working in partnership with other governments, the philanthropic community, and multilateral initiatives is key to successful development work.

In recent years, USAID has undertaken a number of reforms seeking to facilitate partnerships. One such initiative, Local Solutions, aims to bolster the Agency's work by embracing new collaborations, investing in innovation, supporting local systems, and demanding a persistent focus on results. With sustainability as a primary objective, the Agency continues to provide development resources to strengthen local systems, working with many types of organizations—governmental and nongovernmental—to build the capacity of local actors such as governments, civil society, and the private sector. The system relies on all the players to produce desired outcomes.

The relationship between the Agency and PVOs continues to evolve as initiatives to broaden participation reshape the international development environment. Top-down processes are giving way to more collaborative and locally based approaches where various actors from the private sector—corporations; foundations; nongovernmental organizations (NGOs), including PVOs; universities; local businesses; civil society organizations; and diaspora groups—provide and draw on resources from a variety of sources and work in concert.

A current example of this collaborative paradigm is the Ebola response. In the midst of the crisis, USAID worked with the United Nations and nongovernmental partners to bring in additional health care workers, and partnered with other U.S. Government organizations to provide them with critical training to safely care for patients. As the immediate health emergency subsided, USAID began reaching out to its partners for solutions to address the challenges facing Ebola-affected countries as they begin rebuilding their communities and institutions. According to former USAID Administrator Rajiv Shah, the innovations that emerge from these efforts will help West Africa's most vulnerable communities not only beat Ebola but also break the cycle of extreme poverty.

PVOs are essential partners in USAID's efforts to engage a variety of players to facilitate sustainable, locally driven solutions.

The 637 PVOs registered with USAID as of August 1, 2015, allow the Agency to respond to vast global needs through long-standing local partnerships. USAID's commitment to and reliance on its PVO partners is apparent in its responses to the Ebola crisis and the recent earthquakes in Nepal. As of September 25, 2015, PVOs had received 38 percent of the funding the Agency provided to fight the Ebola outbreak and, through September 2, 2015, PVOs had received 33 percent of the funding USAID provided for the humanitarian response to the devastating earthquakes in Nepal (see infographic).

As shown by the FY 2013 data compiled in this report, registered PVOs received $2.8 billion in USAID support. The majority of PVO funding, however, derived from other sources, as registered groups raised $24.1 billion in private support. PVOs received over eight times as much funding from private sources as they did from USAID. These independently generated resources provided PVOs with the capacity to not only leverage Agency funding and address a broader set of development needs but also implement and support international programs in 184 countries and territories—nearly every nation and region in the world.

Going forward, the Agency continues to rely on PVOs and draw on their deep expertise and wide-ranging experience to reach development goals. Throughout USAID's history, PVOs have continually emerged as innovators and collaborators and have always risen to the challenges presented by complex emergencies and development needs. USAID is proud of its current cadre of PVO partners, the world's first responders and frontline change makers.

2015 VOLAG REPORT

The Report of Voluntary Agencies Engaged in Overseas Relief and Development (VolAg Report) provides a snapshot of the work of the U.S. and international PVOs that are registered with USAID. PVOs register with USAID to establish and maintain eligibility to compete for grants and cooperative agreements.

The 2015 VolAg Report includes a brief description and a summary of financial activities for the 518 U.S. PVOs, 113 international PVOs, and 6 U.S. Cooperative Development Organizations (CDOs) registered with USAID as of August 1, 2015.

Select data collected during the registration process, including the information contained in this report and additional data on PVO expertise and geographic presence, is available through the online PVO Registry at pvo.usaid.gov/usaid/.

The VolAg Report is the culmination of the annual effort by the Bureau for Economic Growth, Education and Environment's Office of Local Sustainability staff to collect, validate, and disseminate a clear, factual report that helps inform the Congress, Agency staff, partner organizations, and the general public about the activities of the PVO community. We hope you find it a useful resource.

Health was the major focus area for the PVO community in 2013, followed by humanitarian assistance and agriculture.

ABOUT PVO REGISTRATION

The PVO registration process and engagement activities connect USAID to new and capable nonprofit partners.

A subset of the wider NGO community, PVOs have for more than 50 years played an essential role addressing global humanitarian and development needs in partnership with USAID. PVOs are tax-exempt nonprofits that leverage their expertise and private funding to address critical challenges abroad.

What is PVO Registration?

The PVO registration process enables USAID to identify capable nonprofit partners and ensures that registrants meet the Agency's basic partnership and funding requirements. Organizations apply and are screened based on their financial condition, governance practices, and legal standing. When an organization meets USAID's Conditions of Registration, it is added to the PVO Registry, an online database accessible at pvo.usaid.gov/usaid/.

Why Register?

Registered PVOs are eligible to compete for prime grants and other types of funding, and gain greater visibility with USAID staff and Missions. Registered PVOs also receive access to relevant Agency news and information about funding opportunities through Partnerships@AID, a digital newsletter. In addition, registered PVOs are invited to participate in interactive online events, including webcasts and town halls on current issues in development.

How to Apply

Before applying, a nonprofit organization should evaluate whether it meets USAID's Conditions of Registration for U.S.-based PVOs or International PVOs. Applicants begin the registration process by gathering required documents (e.g., audited financial statements) and obtaining a D-U-N-S number. The next step is to fill out the online application form. Once the application is submitted and complete, USAID determines whether the applicant meets the eight registration conditions. To learn more about the process and apply, visit www.usaid.gov/pvo/.

DOING BUSINESS WITH USAID

To implement its worldwide humanitarian and development activities, USAID uses a number of acquisition and assistance instruments, including contracts, grants, cooperative agreements, and purchase orders. USAID negotiates and initiates these instruments to obtain the commodities and technical assistance the Agency requires to achieve its objectives. Organizations seeking to work with USAID will find useful policy and business information at the following websites:

Training on How to Work with USAID – answers some of the most frequently raised questions and concerns from organizations interested in partnering with USAID.

Get an Award – provides descriptions of grant and contract processes, information on grant programs, and links to other acquisition and assistance resources, including forecasts of upcoming procurement opportunities with offices in Washington and overseas.

Non-Governmental Organization Partnerships – provides an overview of the types of NGOs that USAID works with and examples of activities supported to mobilize the expertise, capacity, and knowledge of NGOs.

Automated Directives System \(ADS\) – details USAID's policies and procedures. (See Chapter 303 – Grants and Cooperative Agreements.)

Partners with grassroots organizations to deliver effective development aid in a number of countries across sub-Saharan Africa. BWA's efforts focus on health care, education, orphan care, and vocational training, and the organization seeks to bring these services to Africans who would not otherwise have access to them. BWA aims for decentralized decision making, so that organizations with the greatest sense of the needs of the local population have the ability to deliver aid to meet those needs. This goal, however, is not pursued at the expense of overall accountability. BWA also seeks to improve the long-term financial viability of its service-delivery partners, with the goal of eventually phasing out BWA support.

Fights acute and chronic malnutrition through early detection and treatment in Leogane, Haiti. CNP Haiti's work is implemented by 38 Haitian women who are trained as community nutrition workers. Children with acute malnutrition are treated with Plumpy'Nut, a ready-to-use therapeutic food, through outpatient programs that allow the children to be treated in the security of their own homes. The organization also enrolls caregivers in its Positive Deviance Hearth program, where they learn to create balanced, nutritionally sound meals for their families. CNP Haiti's Women's Groups and Community Health Committees meet regularly to address village health issues, and the organization's safe water and sanitation projects provide bio-sand filters and latrines to prevent the spread of cholera and other waterborne diseases.

Provides economic opportunities to entrepreneurs in developing countries, where far too many people live in poverty and enterprises often fail simply because they lack the tools needed to succeed. CNFA was founded on the principle that empowering people economically gives them the tools and confidence they need to change their lives. CNFA's mission is to stimulate economic growth and improve rural livelihoods in the developing world by empowering the private sector. The organization specializes in the following areas: productivity, food security, and nutrition; input supply and farm services; economic resilience and rapid recovery; value chain development; volunteer technical assistance; and access to finance. CNFA mobilizes American farmers and other business and technical agriculture experts to provide advice and training to their counterparts abroad. CNFA currently operates volunteer programs in Angola, Malawi, and Mozambique.

Partners with rural Nicaraguan communities to improve their living standards through sustainable development in clean water, sanitation, reforestation, and health education. One-third of Nicaragua's rural communities lack access to clean drinking water. Globally, 1.8 million children die annually because of illnesses linked to consumption of polluted water. Women and girls shoulder the burden of collecting water for household needs, spending hours daily carrying 40-pound buckets of water for miles. Access to clean drinking water dramatically improves family living standards, reducing disease and child mortality, freeing girls' and women's time, and improving school attendance and performance.

Alleviates hunger in some of the world's poorest communities by providing resources to empower people to feed themselves. FRB does not ship grain or food overseas; instead, the organization offers people dignity by giving them a hand up instead of a handout, thus breaking the cycle of dependency. As a Christian, nongovernmental, humanitarian organization, FRB is committed to providing sustainable food security in the developing world through small-scale agricultural interventions. Programs focus on education and the introduction of no-till alternatives, conservation, improved seeds and livestock, market access, water reclamation, food storage, and other techniques that allow people to feed their families, send their children to school, and improve the quality of life at home and in their communities. The organization's strategic goal is to engage the grassroots U.S. agricultural community in efforts to solve the problem of hunger worldwide.

Works to end hunger and poverty and care for the earth by mobilizing smallholder farming families, a group responsible for growing 70 percent of the food the world eats. Since 1944, Heifer Project International has helped over 15 million people increase their economic resiliency, gain food security, and create sustainable livelihoods. Through Heifer's model, families realize better nutrition and income, greater access to markets, climate change resiliency, and energized social capital while building thriving communities committed to gender equity. Participants receive suitable animals and plants along with training in sustainable agriculture and livestock management and "pass on the gift" of animal offspring, seeds, skills, or other resources to neighbors, creating a sustainable impact for generations to come.

Focuses on five programs: the U.S.-Vietnam Trade Council (USVTC), the New Forests Project (NFP), Veterans International/Cambodia (VIC), the Vietnam Veterans of America Foundation (VVA), and The International Center Sports Corps (ICSC). USVTC seeks to strengthen ties between the United States and Vietnam through economic, diplomatic, and citizen exchanges and works on issues such as climate change. NFP supports renewable and self-sustaining grassroots efforts in agroforestry, reforestation, watersheds, and water and sanitation. VIC works to rehabilitate people living with disabilities in Cambodia and help them to lead active, fulfilling lives. VVA operates humanitarian and school construction programs in Vietnam. ICSC aims to improve understanding between the people of developing countries and the United States through the medium of youth sports.

Promotes quality journalism worldwide in the belief that independent, vigorous media are crucial in improving the human condition. ICFJ's work around the world—i.e., providing journalistic, media management, and technical expertise as well as information and support services—is critical to the development of effective, independent media organizations that are ethically grounded and financially stable. ICFJ also assists U.S. media organizations in providing better coverage of international issues that are too often ignored, from the global economy to immigration, and in fostering better connections among U.S. journalists and their counterparts abroad. Training for ethnic and non-English-language reporters in the United States has become a strong focus for ICFJ, given the growing influence of these journalists. ICFJ offers fellowships, facilitates exchanges, provides a range of consulting services, and has conducted training programs for some 70,000 journalists in 180 countries.

Improves the lives of the rural poor in developing nations through agricultural and economic development. iDE's guiding principle is that the rural poor are natural entrepreneurs who, if given the opportunity, will invest their limited resources to ensure their families' food supply and generate income. iDE empowers rural farmers to pull themselves out of poverty by making available quality inputs, training, affordable technologies, capital, and access to markets. Simple, low-cost water technologies increase income generation by allowing farmers to cultivate high-value, labor-intensive crops. These technologies have enabled families to become more efficient agricultural producers, generally doubling their net annual income in the first year. iDE's efforts have helped some 17 million people escape poverty.

Provides a preferential health care option for the poor. By establishing long-term relationships with sister organizations based in settings of poverty, PIH strives to achieve two overarching goals: bring the benefits of modern medical science to those most in need of them and serve as an antidote to despair. PIH draws on the resources of the world's leading medical and academic institutions and on the lived experience of the world's poorest and sickest communities. PIH's mission is both medical and moral; it is based on solidarity rather than charity alone. When the organization's patients are ill and have no access to care, PIH's team of health professionals, scholars, and activists will do whatever it takes to make them well.

Improves the health of people in the developing world by focusing on serious challenges such as lack of family planning, HIV/AIDS, barriers to maternal health, and the greatest threats to children under five, including malaria, diarrhea, pneumonia, and malnutrition. PSI is a leading global health organization with programs in over 60 countries. In 2013, PSI helped avert an estimated 254,792 HIV infections, 15,441 maternal deaths, 5.6 million unintended pregnancies, and 273,740 child deaths due to malaria, pneumonia, and diarrhea. Of every dollar PSI spends, 94 cents goes to programs that directly reach the people it serves.

Works to end child slavery in Haiti in our lifetimes. "Restavek" is a form of modern-day slavery that affects one in every 15 Haitian children. Restavek children are often given to relatives or strangers to perform menial tasks for no pay. RFF's comprehensive strategy to end this practice includes meeting the long-term needs of restavek children through effective child advocacy, establishing transitional homes for children who suffer the worst forms of abuse, working with churches and pastors (i.e., culturally significant leaders) to change societal attitudes toward restavek, establishing community centers to enhance economic empowerment for children and adults, connecting government agencies with the people through partnerships with churches, and using effective mass media campaigns to provide information on justice issues and family planning. RFF seeks to undermine the social acceptance of, and economic need for, restavek.

Ensures the survival of sea turtles through research, education, advocacy, and the protection of the natural habitats upon which they depend, with an emphasis on turtles in the Atlantic and the Wider Caribbean Basin. Established in 1959 as the Caribbean Conservation Corporation, STC employs research, habitat protection, public education, community outreach, networking, and advocacy as its basic tools. The organization conducts annual sea turtle-monitoring programs in Tortuguero, Costa Rica, and in Panama. STC works with the governments and citizens of Costa Rica, Nicaragua, and Panama to develop a regional plan for sea turtle conservation. STC also works to protect U.S. populations of sea turtles through its Florida-based programs.

Works at the grassroots level in international development to improve the quality of life and income of rural people by introducing appropriate, sustainable agricultural methods. SHI was founded in 1959, and its programs are designed to promote self-reliance and create links between farmers and their communities. SHI carries out projects in Ghana and Nicaragua that introduce Quality Protein Maize to improve crop yields and nutrition. SHI provides opportunities for intermediate means of transport to reduce cost and improve efficiency of farm-to-market transport. SHI also introduces postharvest technologies, which include corn cribs, dryers, and shellers. SHI provides microenterprise opportunities to women and youth through the use of revolving funds. In addition, the organization has initiated projects to improve water supplies in selected villages in rural Nicaragua. Rural training centers opened in both country programs in 2012.

Helps people improve their lives. A nonprofit people-to-people movement, TFL began helping people in developing countries plant and care for fruit trees in 1984. The trees protect the environment and provide a low-cost, self-renewing source of nutrition, and TFL's philosophy has spurred a global movement for sharing knowledge, skills, and resources. Today the organization works with people on projects that strike at the root causes of poverty, malnutrition, and disease. Since its inception, TFL has motivated more than 3 million people in several countries to address needs in their communities, not only by planting trees but also by digging water wells, building fuel-efficient stoves, promoting scientific studies of beneficial plants, and establishing schools and children's libraries.

Empowers people living on less than $1.25 a day to take their first steps out of poverty, providing them with the resources to build sustainable livelihoods for a better quality of life. In partnership with local agencies in India, West Africa, and Central America, Trickle Up uses a carefully sequenced set of time-bound interventions designed to move families sustainably out of extreme poverty. From its inception in 1979, Trickle Up has been committed to serving people at the most extreme levels of poverty, with a particular focus on women, people with disabilities, indigenous populations, and scheduled castes and tribes. Through successful programs, technical assistance, and advocacy, Trickle Up seeks to leverage its expertise in livelihood development with ultra-poor families to change the way large government and development organizations invest in this vulnerable population.

Equips leaders to mobilize communities to care for their own children with their own resources. VCI promotes community involvement and ownership, recognizing that communities that run programs are more likely to own and sustain them over time. VCI also promotes indigenous leadership and reliance on community resources. These core principles create program standards that are not likely to create dependence on Western aid. The organization serves individuals from a number of faith traditions and seeks to enlist members and leaders of various faiths as volunteers. VCI chapters initiate development programming with the outcomes they want for their orphans and vulnerable children clearly defined. The organization evaluates program success by assessing the quality of outcomes achieved rather than the quantity of services provided.

Delivers high-quality, culturally appropriate vision care for those earning under $8 a day, the base-of-the-pyramid consumer. VisionSpring has incorporated successful elements of its vision-entrepreneur model into a hub-and-spoke approach, in which the organization's optical shops operate as hubs and vision entrepreneurs act as spokes extending into surrounding communities. Tested and proven in El Salvador, this approach was adapted in 2012 for replication in India. The income generated through the sale of products with higher margins at our optical shops enables VisionSpring to conduct the resource intensive work of reaching low-income communities in remote areas with limited access to eye care. In addition, VisionSpring has partnered with BRAC in Bangladesh to support the Reading Glasses for Improved Livelihoods program in underserved communities.

Increases girls' access to education in remote rural areas of Kenya and Senegal by developing training and community awareness programs that empower girls to build better lives and foster equitable and sustainable communities. Specifically, WGEP provides elementary school scholarships to help more girls enroll in school and middle school scholarships, mentoring, and after-school tutoring to help more girls stay in school. The organization promotes community awareness on the importance of girls' education in rural villages, holds elementary school "molding clubs" for boys and girls, offers women's literacy classes, provides an alternative rite-of-passage program in Kenya, and strengthens the capacity of local partner organizations so they can successfully implement girls' education programs and act as effective leaders in their communities.

Fights against hunger and defends the fundamental rights of populations in difficulty. Born in the context of the Afghan crisis and emergency response for Afghan refugees who fled to Pakistan in 1979, ACF, a humanitarian, voluntary, and professional nongovernmental organization, was created by a group of French intellectuals. ACF's mission is to intervene in the field to save lives and preserve and restore food security for populations. Working in conjunction with the people it serves, ACF provides the material and human resources necessary to address needs, relieve human suffering, and safeguard human dignity. ACF contributes to the protection of populations by taking action and testifying.

Provides professional assistance to rural farmers threatened by exclusion in southern countries. AVSF works to ensure that rural farming is economically viable, ecologically sustainable, and socially fair, as agriculture not only provides sustenance and livelihoods but also contributes to local democracy and to the vitality of rural areas. AVSF works through more than 80 programs in 18 countries, helping small farmers' associations protect production systems, improve productivity, manage resources, consolidate trade organizations, and bring products to local and international markets. Initiatives contribute to economic growth by providing employment in rural areas, increase health and food security, and facilitate sustainable management of natural resources. AVSF also advocates for greater justice in the international sphere and includes agriculturalists in its efforts to change policies and practices that breed poverty and injustice.

Builds healthy and sustainable communities in Africa. For more than 29 years, CPAR has been targeting some of the most vulnerable rural areas of Ethiopia, Malawi, Tanzania, and northern Uganda with important interventions related to food security, water and sanitation, and access to primary health services. CPAR's work is guided by the underlying belief that everything is connected: specifically, that health is determined not only by the existence of health care services but also by social, economic, and environmental factors. Therefore, CPAR's work not only involves direct health interventions—ensuring a continuum of care between clinic and community—but also addresses the determinants of health, which include access to clean water, adequate food, and a safe and healthy environment. All CPAR projects are designed to be sustainable, ensuring that benefits continue to accrue long after CPAR's direct involvement.

Works for global solidarity. Established in 1985 as a secular, independent association, CESVI is guided by the principle of human solidarity and the ideal of social justice. These values underpin the organization's humanitarian and development work and affirm its commitment to universal human rights. CESVI's name is derived from the Italian "cooperazione e sviluppo" (cooperation and development), words that convey the organization's philosophy and reflect the leading role played by project beneficiaries. Main activities include the emergency supply of medical equipment and materials and the distribution of food and nonfood items. The organization rehabilitates public infrastructure—schools, hospitals, water wells, water distribution systems—and houses. CESVI's development activities include HIV/AIDS prevention, agricultural promotion, support for business, malaria and dengue fever prevention, hospital improvements, and food security.

Provides practical solutions to help children living in crisis and poverty situations. Childslife International believes projects and programs do not need a lot of frills to be effective, and often a relatively simple solution can have the greatest impact. The organization's tailor-made approaches ensure that all activities respond to the direct needs of children and their communities. Childslife has developed an extensive and diverse development program consisting of the following integrated and interlinked components: shelter and infrastructure, food, and education. The infrastructure aspect of programming is central to the execution and support of the other components, and overall self-sustainability is the goal.

CHRISTIAN AID

Fights against hunger and poverty by providing integrated aid—from rapid disaster relief to long-term development projects. Welthungerhilfe is one of the largest nongovernmental aid agencies in Germany; it was founded in 1962 as the German section of the Freedom from Hunger Campaign of the U.N. Food and Agricultural Organization. Help to self-help is Welthungerhilfe's basic principle; it allows the organization to strengthen structures from the bottom up, working together with local partner organizations, and ensures the long-term success of projects. The organization also fights to change the conditions that lead to hunger and poverty by keeping the public informed and taking an advisory role in national and international policy development. Welthungerhilfe envisions a world in which all people can exercise their right to lead a self-determined life in dignity and justice, free from hunger and poverty.

Supports projects that provide fortified foods to large populations—through market channels where feasible and through public-sector delivery systems when markets fail. GAIN is a Swiss foundation that mobilizes public-private partnerships and provides financial and technical support to deliver nutritious foods to people most at risk of malnutrition. The organization was created in 2002 at a Special Session of the U.N. General Assembly on Children. GAIN is delivering improved nutrition to an estimated 273 million people, half of whom are women and children, in more than 25 countries. GAIN's Business Alliance unites food producers and is a global focal point for private-sector strategies against undernutrition in Africa, Asia, and Latin America and the Caribbean. More nutritious food improves individual productivity and helps reduce poverty.

Empowers people with disabilities, regardless of race or religion, in Africa and Asia. Light for the World pursues this goal in the most sustainable way—through projects for prevention and treatment of blindness, inclusive education, vocational training, and income generation. The organization works from the perspective that people with disabilities, who in many countries have fewer options with respect to basic social services and who often belong to the most vulnerable groups, have the right to be included in society. Local partners—from eye care providers to community organizations—manage the organization's daily program activities. Light for the World is a knowledge broker between policymakers and people with disabilities, a facilitator and integrator of institution-strengthening efforts, and a funder of projects that generate sustainable impact.

Provides children and young people with psychosocial support, education, and protection to help them overcome the devastating effects of war. In War Child Holland's psychosocial support projects, children and young people build on their resilience and strength. With the right support, most children will be able to cope with the adversities they experience. For children, war often means no school, either because it is too dangerous to attend or because there are simply no schools operating. War Child enables children and young people to claim their right to quality education. War Child also works to make sure that children and young people are better protected. The organization empowers them to express their views, encourages adults to take them seriously, and advocates for the development and implementation of legislation and policies.

Fosters broad-based economic growth, raises living standards, and creates vibrant communities. ACDI/VOCA's technical and management assistance enables enterprises, financial institutions, cooperatives, and other organizations to manage and finance themselves and succeed in the global economy. Practice areas include food security, agribusiness, enterprise development, financial services, and community development. Long known for its agricultural development programming, ACDI/VOCA is today a leading implementer of USAID Feed the Future projects. In addition, the organization is known for its value chain and inclusive market system approaches to enterprise development and poverty reduction as well as for its ability to integrate financial services in economic growth programs, incorporate development approaches and nutrition improvements into food security projects, and increase community participation. ACDI/VOCA is implementing approximately 50 projects in 32 countries on behalf of public, private, and multilateral funders.

TEL: (202) 638-6222
FAX: (202) 638-1374
EMAIL: ncba@ncba.coop
WEB: www.ncba.coop

Provides technical assistance and training to enhance the governance and assist in the development of cooperatives—i.e., member-owned businesses, small enterprises, and microenterprises—at the grassroots level in both urban and rural areas. NCBA CLUSA seeks to alleviate poverty through economic empowerment by pioneering practices such as conservation and nutrition-led agriculture. The association's training and development activities focus on democracy building, improving business skills, accessing financing and information, and a community-based cooperative approach to gain and protect market access, primarily for the rural poor. Recently, NCBA CLUSA has applied its approach to community-managed health and sustainable natural resource use as well as to strengthening local organizations and governments to support cooperative economic development.

NATIONAL RURAL ELECTRIC COOPERATIVE ASSOCIATION
NRECA

EMAIL: norma.hiller@nreca.coop
WEB: www.nreca.org

Designs and implements efficient and financially sustainable rural electrification systems worldwide and promotes the consumer-owned electric utility model to ensure electric service is responsive to local needs. NRECA draws on conventional and nonconventional technologies, develops low-cost design adaptations, and uses renewable energy resources where appropriate. Other services NRECA provides include developing national rural electrification plans and training local electric utility employees in electric utility management, accounting, engineering, operations, and maintenance. NRECA maintains offices in 6 countries and currently has projects in 15 countries. Domestic NRECA member cooperatives generate, transmit, and distribute electricity to more than 42 million consumers in the United States.
